RECKLESS DRIVING NOT SEPARATION CAUSE, SAYS COURT

Justice Clarke's Comment on Mrs. J. E. Roosevelt's Claim That Husband Was Speeder.

DEFENDANT IN TEARS

Step-Mother Was "Snappish at Dinner," According to One Daughter's Testimony.

Reckless automobile driving by husband is not a legal ground for separation, Supreme Court Justice Clarke decided to-day in the suit for separation brought by Mrs. Edith H. Roosevelt against John E. Roosevelt first cousin of T. R. One of the wife's most serious charges was that her wealthy husband insisted on taking a motor tour on which he would do the driving. To show that he was not a reckless driver Attorney C. Walter Randall called Mr. Roosevelt's chauffeur. William Concheh, who testified that his employer was not reckless.

"There is no need to go into that," interposed the Court. "Reckless driving of an automobile by a husband is no reason for a wife leaving him. If she does not care for fast driving she need not go along."

Concheh testified also that just before Mrs. Roosevelt left the country home at Sayville, L. I., in October, 1915, she told him she was leaving there because she felt that by leaving him at that time she could get a bigger and better financial settlement than later on. On several occasions, the witness declared, Mrs. Roosevell sent him to Sayville village for alcoholic liquors.

During frequent quarrels, the chauffeur continued, Mrs. Roosevelt did all the talking, her husband remaining silent.
The antagonistic feeling of Mr.

Roosevelt's two daughters, Jean and Pansy, toward their stepmother was explained by Miss Jean, who followed the chauffeur on the witness stand. She answered questions in a broad English accent. "Were there any quarrels between your father and siepmother at the town house, No. 818 Madison Ave-nues?" asked Mr. Randall.

"I never saw any quarrels," the witness replied. "Mrs. Roosevelt was very snappish and disagreeable at the dinner table many times, but as we all kept our tempers a quarrel was averted. My father was never angry at his wife so far as I know." On cross-examination Miss Roosevelt said she and her sisters had considerable feeling against their stepmother, which she said she suppressed until the summer of 1915.

"Then," Miss Roosevelt added. "I saw she did not intend to do her best by my father. We have never been openly unfriendly."

Q. Sort of armed neutrality? A.

Strict neutrality, rather.
The testimony of Mrs. Gladys Roosevelt Dick, the married daugher, brought tears to the eyes of her father.

"We had never opposed his marriage to this lady," said Mrs. Dick, "nor did we approve it. We were hoping for the best out of a marry. riage in which such a wide disparity in ages existed. We—my sister and I—picked out the good points in our prospective atenmather and hand

At this juncture Mr. Roosevelt pulled off his glasses and dropped his head into his arms folded on the edge of the table, sobbling aloud.

"After the marriage our distrust was justified. Mrs. Roosevelt became utterly selfish, paid no attention to my father and made life for him an awful mess."
